Best penny stock list 2019

Penny stocks have a well-deserved reputation for low quality, high risk, and intense volatility. However, by practicing due diligence, you can discover some hidden gems—inexpensive equities with solid fundamentals and strong growth plans—in the most unexpected places. Below, you'll find updates on previously discussed penny stocks, followed by a few new intriguing and inexpensive trade ideas that are still flying under most investors' radars. Some of the setups described below may no longer be relevant or intact as of the time you read this article. Please conduct your own due diligence. Many stocks mentioned here were also discussed in the Peter Leeds newsletter. Leeds may own shares in some of the investments mentioned, in which case the newsletter will clearly indicate that fact. Please note that penny stocks are notoriously volatile. Since ARC Document Solutions, Inc. (ARC) was featured as a "Penny Stock to Watch" last month, it has soared nearly 19% as positive sentiment continues to grow around the name and its turnaround story. Upside potential is still abundant here based on the group's rapidly improving fundamentals, with double-digit earnings per share (EPS) growth and a promising forward P/E ratio of 13.60 suggesting even brighter days ahead for ARC shareholders. 5G play Ceragon Networks Ltd. (CRNT) has had a tough six months, to say the least, losing approximately 38% of its value during that time. This is despite numerous contract wins, including a recent $15 million deal with a Tier-1 operator in India. Like many of its industry peers, Ceragon's performance has been hurt by supply shortages. Nonetheless, its EPS is expected to grow a stunning 333% next year, and management maintains that the supply issues will likely resolve by the second half of 2022. Once the 5G roll-out resumes, Ceragon Networks stock could be a winner. After LiqTech International, Inc. (LIQT) announced some very negative fourth-quarter and full-year 2021 earnings last week (with a sharp drop in revenue as the main focus), shares fell off the proverbial cliff to the tune of around 51%. A falling knife? Maybe. But the current price may be an interesting entry point on the clean technology stock. LiqTech's positioning as a "green" company means that it could benefit from the emphasis in the stock market on environmental, social, and governance (ESG) right now, and its EPS is set to climb 125% next year. A very low relative strength index (RSI) of 16.15 may also indicate the stock is highly oversold and due for a rebound. Wrap Technologies, Inc. (WRAP) produces the BolaWrap 150, which it describes as "a hand-held remote restraint device that discharges an eight-foot bola style Kevlar tether to entangle a subject at a range of 10-25 feet." In contrast to a taser, the BolaWrap promises to restrain "non-compliant" subjects without causing them pain while ensuring a safe space exists between a police officer and the subject. The stock took a huge hit of 40% after recently announcing the departure of its CEO and CFO, but the reaction may be overdone based on the apparent interest among law enforcement agencies in WRAP's product line, garnering approximately 70% quarterly growth in revenue as of the most recent quarter. The net income loss of $24.40 million in the trailing 12 months is certainly worrisome; however, an excellent balance sheet (with current assets outweighing current liabilities by a factor of almost 15x) should hold the company in good stead as it exits the research and development (R&D) stage and accumulates more sales. These are the stocks which are very illiquid and are not very popular among investors. Very little knowledge about their fundamentals is available on such stocks so researching and analysing them is quite difficult. However, such stocks can have great potential to turn multibaggers giving enormous returns to investors in a short time. These stocks are also traded in very less quantity and hence it is easier for them to hit higher circuits in their trade frequently. However, the same is true for lower circuits as well. If an investor is able to find a penny stock with good fundamentals and is able to buy the stock at extremely low valuations, he can make an enormous fortune. Investment in penny stocks is not very common due to high risks associated. Only investors with a very high risk appetite are advised to do so. While the potential is very high, the probability of such stocks going bust is also excessive. Even if you are a high risk investor, not more than 2 to 3 percent of your portfolio should comprise of penny stocks. Also, one should not have a buy and hold approach with such stocks. If you have received a decent return from the stock, selling is more advisable than holding. Despite the high risk, some penny stocks have managed to generate exorbitant returns for investors in the last 1 year. Let's take a look at some such stocks: Flomic Global Logistics - 9,113% The stock has jumped from around ₹1.24 in October 2020 to around ₹114 currently, giving a return of over 9,100 percent to its investors in just 1 year. HFCL Limited manufactures and sells telecom products in India and internationally. The company operates through Telecom Products and Turnkey Contracts and Services segments. The company was formerly known as Himachal Futuristic Communications Limited and changed its name to HFCL Limited in October 2019. HFCL Limited was incorporated in 1987 and is based in New Delhi, India. CG Power - 378% The stock has jumped from around ₹24 in October 2020 to around ₹115 currently, giving a return of 378 percent to its investors in just 1 year. CG Power And Industrial Solutions Limited, formerly Crompton Greaves Limited, is engaged in the business of power transformers and reactors, low tension motors and switchgears. The company provides end-to-end solutions to utilities, industries and consumers. It also manufactures a range of power and distribution transformers, extra high voltage (EHV), medium voltage (MV) circuit breakers, lightning arrestors, isolators and vacuum interrupters. These are some penny stocks that have turned multibagger giving robust returns to its investors. However, one must always be cautious and research as much as possible before investing in a penny stock. Investors with low risk appetite should prefer mutual funds or other safe large cap stocks instead of penny stocks.
